It is said that many persons have refused to give the census enumerators Answer Census the information which they have Questions. asked in compliance with their instructions. Probably there are a number of people who be-Heve that in this way they are showing their independence, says the Chicago Tribune. Their course is both unpatriotic and foolish. In the first place it is of interest to the whole country that an accurate census should be obtained. inasmuch as the statistics now secured will stand for the next ten years. The school census may be "more complete and more accurate," as the takers of it assert, but nevertheless the people of the world at large will be more disposed to credit the federal authority with accuracy than the municipal goveroment. The former has a higher reputation, for some reason or other which is not difficult to appreciate, for faithful performance of its duties. The refusal to give information is foolish, because the law provides strict penalties for refusal, and the federal courts are sure if not swift to punish violations of the law. Those who refuse to give information are law breakers and will be punished as such. The questions may seem prying, but they are of vital importance to the obtaining of accurate data.

Philadelphia people were treated to the unusual spectacle of a dog spread at full length upon a cake of ice one very warm day recently, says the Record. The ice had been left before a store door early in the morning, The dog waddled languidly up the street, the sorriest victim of heat to be seen in a day's tramp. He looked at the ice, came nearer, sniffed it in evident enjoyment, then in raptures of delight ran his tongue over its cool surface. As a cat capers in entnip, the log capered around the ice. Then he turned twice and stretched himself spon it. Many a passer-by seemed to wave him his cool position.

TOO MANY OF US.

Human beings and wild animale have one great thing in common, the fight for life, and every year that fight for life becomes harder and harder in proportion as the world becomes more thickly populated with people, all striving after the same thing-money! The world is everyyear becoming more crowded. More people are born in proportion to those that die. To take an example of this we have but to turn to these United States, a young country, where everything is in the highest degree favorable to great prolificacy. During the 50 years from 1790 to 1840 the population of the United States doubled twice. From 1880 to 1885 the increase was 10 per cent. The average per says the Cincinnati Enquirer. As a set-back against this phenomenal increase of human life, however, turn to China. The Chinese, as a nation, date back some 5,000 years. The country is five times the size of Germany, and warmer and more fruitful than Europe, producing in a great many parts two harvests a year. Why, then, is China not peopled so densely that there is scarcely breathing room in the fact that among the Chinese infanticide is encouraged by law. A terrible, and yet, the Celestials will tell you, the only really sensible way to provide for the nation's well being.

In the last 100 years Europe has land in the silent doubled its population. Between 1820 and 1880 the figures rose from 200,000,-000 to 330,000,000 notwithstanding the Crimean and Franco-Prussian wars. Yet this gain is overshadowed by America's. There is one factor in the over-population theory that must be has been done, says a writer in the taken into account, and that is to be found in the fact that whereas certain nations increase enormously others stand still, while some palpably lessen. Yet, if towns are to go on increasing, is the direct result of the various so- England will beyond doubt sooner or cieties that have sprung to life and later be confronted with a very serivigor in the last decade seems to be ous problem—the want of "stretching

> Such a picture as the above is enough to fill the sanest man with horror. What is to be the end of this terrible increase? But the picture of life 3,000 years ahead, taking for granted that evolution will go on working as it has worked in the past, is appalling. What is to be the answer to the problem of over-population? Sooner or later the world will be brought face to face with the working out of some solution of it.

A recent number of a popular society journal says that, according to the Al-Chances for Rich manach de Gotha, there are in Europe Americans. 71 unmarried princesses of the blood royal and only 47 princes of marriageable age, and adds that this affords 24 chances for rich Americans to start royal families of their own. This information is interesting, says the Chicago Tribune, and. the rich Americans will doubtless be grateful for the kind feeling that prompts it, but it is safe to predict that not even the specious suggestion of starting royal families of their own will incite Americans to action. They know too well that starting royal families of their own means the being grafted on to and eventually swallowed up, identity and all, by the parent stem, and rather than accept an end so inglorious they will stop at home and be proud heads of proud though unroyal families. Another factor that enters too largely into the matter to be ignored is the home market. So far it has all that the most fastidious could desire, and if the 24 luckless princesses would catch rich American husbands they will have to throw out far more alluring and substantial bait than that of the establishing of royal families.
